

Office of the President

Dear Central State University,

The recent Executive Order from the White House has initiated concerns, discontent and uncertainty regarding the immigration and travel status of those who journey from countries with high Muslim populations. While this situation has created anxieties among Americans and the international communities, I want to assure you, that Central State University holds fast to the values of welcoming all who join our halls for diverse experiences of people, education, cultures, religions, ethnicities and races.

The humanity of hope is the essence of who we are as Americans and that humanity has been the bright light for thousands who seek refuge from discrimination, isolationism and fear. Central State University has and will always be an academic institution wedded to social justice, multiculturalism and fairness for all.

Central State University holds high our humanity and respect for everyone and practice the true meaning of our tenets of Service...Protocol...Civility®. We support our international faculty, staff and students and we are a better institution because of their rich diversity!

If any faculty, staff or students have questions or need guidance, please contact Dr. Fahmi Abboushi, Director of the Center for Global Education, located in Rm. 314, Wesley Hall. Dr. Abboushi can also be contacted at fabboushi@centralstate.edu.

Sincerely,

Cynthia Jackson-Hammond
President
