

Addressing Faculty Concerns about the Return to Campus

Wednesday, July 1, 2020, 2:00 - 3:00 pm ET

As more campuses announce re-opening plans for Fall 2020, faculty members and other instructors have raised concerns about a range of issues, including the health risks associated with in-person instruction and the challenges of providing effective online instruction. We will discuss faculty concerns about safety, equity, and good pedagogy as plans for in-person instruction this fall come into clearer focus. Our speakers will share briefly what is happening on their campuses then we will turn to questions and comments from participants. All faculty affairs professionals are welcome to participate in this Zoom huddle.

Panel:

Laura Griner Hill, Vice Provost for Faculty Development and Affairs, Washington State University
Matt Kinservik, Vice Provost for Faculty Affairs, University of Delaware