

Managing Faculty Performance and Productivity in the Era of COVID-19

Wednesday, July 15, 2020, 2:00-3:00 pm ET

We know that working from home has impacted faculty productivity, from the start of the pandemic in mid-March and into the foreseeable future. The sudden shift to virtual teaching; lab and facility closures; increased childcare and family responsibilities including home-schooling; disruption of domestic and international travel for research and other scholarly activities – all of these changes and disruptions have impacted the ability of faculty to carry out their research, teaching, and service work to the highest levels. How will our institutions take into consideration the extraordinary circumstances of 2020 when reviewing faculty productivity and performance? How do we support faculty through the coming year when the “new normal” remains in flux? What consideration will be given to faculty candidates when reviewing cases for promotion and tenure now and into the future?

Panel:

Jack Finney, Vice Provost for Faculty Affairs, Virginia Tech University

Janet Kistner, Vice President for Faculty Development and Advancement, Florida State University