

The Ongoing Effects of COVID-19 on Faculty Affairs

January 8, 2021, 2:00 – 3:00 PM ET

Over the past eight months the COVID-19 pandemic has forced institutions of higher education to adapt to massive disruptions of faculty affairs operations. While numerous vaccines have been developed and are currently being distributed the effects of COVID-19 will remain with us for years to come. From pay differentials due to tenure clock stoppages, to research activation and funding, to even what teaching will look like, our institutions still face many challenges related to COVID-19.

Our panelists from Cornell University will share how their institution is addressing the ongoing effects of COVID-19. The huddle will include time for small group discussion in breakout rooms.

Panelists:

- Avery August, Vice Provost for Academic Affairs, Cornell University
- Yael Levite, Associate Vice Provost for Faculty Development and Diversity, Cornell University
